

The Times's War News in England.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

You goodnaturedly complain of our censorship. I can tell you that your readers are well off! I have read THE NEW YORK TIMES regularly since almost the commencement of the war, and even with its seven days' journey. It gives me a far clearer idea of how things are going on, with now and then a few words which throw light on some highly censored or almost non-recorded bit of war news in the London papers.

W. H. M. GRIMSHAW.

Eastry, Kent, England, Oct. 27, 1914.

The New York Times

Copyright © The New York Times
Originally published November 8, 1914