
Reading for the Blind.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

If any of your readers have blind friends who can read braille print, grade 1½, and would like to have some light reading in that print, I would like to have the addresses of the blind persons sent to me at 775 Westminister Road, Brooklyn.

The matter is principally short excerpts from the current magazines, with some extracts from such works as R. L. Stevenson's "Lay Morals."

The material may be either returned to me, or passed on, or destroyed after being read.

ROBERT GRIMSHAW.

Brooklyn, July 24, 1932.

The New York Times

Copyright © The New York Times
Originally published July 28, 1932